

2021 ASIA PACIFIC EE FORUM THE POWER OF CONNECTION

Advancing Environmental Education in the Asia-Pacific

Nov 30 - Dec 2

Join the Global Environmental Education Partnership, a collaborative learning network, for a three-day Forum focused on how environmental education can help create a more just and sustainable future.

Participants from across the Asia Pacific region will have a chance to hear from leading environmental education experts, including high-level government officials from the United States, Taiwan, and other countries, who are advancing key environmental and social issues. There will also be opportunities for networking with environmental education professionals from across the region to learn, share, and strengthen collaboration.

Visit thegeep.org for more information.

This Forum will build on all the excellent work that is already happening across the region and will allow for international exchange and learning.

More specifically, this Forum will explore:

- How environmental education can help address large-scale environmental and social issues, including climate change, environmental justice, biodiversity loss, air quality, and marine litter;
- The role of networks, and how to build stronger regional and country level networks that strengthen impact and promote collaboration across borders and sectors; and
- How we can build leadership in the region and transition to a more just and sustainable future.
